1 I. SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

2 A. Introduction

3 Israeli resident David Stern (“Stern”), on behalf of himself and the putative class of 4 purchasers of VeriFone Holdings, Inc. (“VeriFone”) common stock on the Tel Aviv Stock
 5 Exchange (“TASE”) (“TASE Purchasers” or “TASE Objectors”) from March 7, 2007 through 6 December 2, 2007, objects to the proposed Stipulation of Settlement (“Settlement”) of this United 7 States (“US”) Class Action. If approved, the Settlement will purportedly extinguish Stern’s 8 individual and the TASE Purchaser Class’s claims – under both Israeli and US law – while short-
 9 changing them and preferring the claims of US Lead Plaintiff (“USLP”), an improper outcome
 10 being achieved via a confusing and deficient Settlement notice.<sup>1</sup>

11 Morrison v. National Bank of Australia Ltd., 561 U.S. 267, 130 S. Ct. 2869 (2010)
 12 (“Morrison”) and Amchem Products v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591 (1997) (“Amchem”) command that (i)
 13 because the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. § 78a et seq.) (“1934 Act”) does not 14 have extra-territorial application, purchasers of securities on foreign exchanges cannot assert 1934
 15 Act claims, and (ii) the U.S. Constitution and Fed.R.Civ.P. 23 (“Rule 23”) forbid the “adventurous”
 16 practice of consensually creating expanded settlement classes not certifiable in an adversarial 17 context, to provide defendants “global peace”, preferential treatment to the representative parties and 18 larger fees to class counsel. Morrison, 130 S.Ct. at 2884-85; Amchem, 521 U.S. at 620-23.

19 The USLP has violated these restrictions through the 11th hour expansion of the class 20 definition – for settlement purposes only – to include purchasers “on foreign exchanges or 21 otherwise” – language never included in any prior complaints during the six years this action has 22 been pending – and then obtaining preliminary approval of this newly created “global class” under 23 opaque circumstances. The USLP did this to give defendants “global peace” while benefitting from a 24 Settlement and Plan of Allocation that short-changed the newly added TASE Purchasers and 25 preferred the USLP while giving that counsel grossly preferential payment terms on its legal fees, 26 which put the class members at risk. Rule 23’s requirement of fair and adequate representation of all

27 <sup>1</sup> To the Court and parties, please take notice that Plaintiff Stern intends to appear at the Final 28 Settlement Approval Hearing.

1 class members forbids approving settlements emanating from such conduct.

2 Creating enlarged settlement classes – the certifiability of which was never litigated in an
3 adversarial context – providing defendants with “global peace”, the representative plaintiff(s) with 4 preferential treatment and class counsel with large fees – is a serious departure from proper
5 settlement standards. Amchem, 521 U.S. at 626-29. That is why the Ninth Circuit demands courts
6 “must pay ‘undiluted, even heightened, attention’ to class certification requirements in a settlement
7 context.” Hanlon v. Chrysler Corp. 150 F.3d 1011, 1019 (9th Cir. 1998), quoting Amchem, 521 US
8 at 2248. Settlements require courts to be “even more scrupulous” and review them under “a higher 9 standard of fairness”, to insure “strict compliance with Rule 23”, in order to be certain the settling 10 parties are not conducting a “staged performance” to “put one over on the court.” Amchem, supra, at 11 619-22; In re Gen. Motors Corp. Pick-Up Truck Fuel Tank Products Liab. Litig., 55 F.3d 768, 805
12 (3d Cir. 1995) (“In re Gen. Motors”); Hanlon, supra, at 1026; Zimmermann v. Epstein Becker &
13 Green, P.C., 09-CV-30194, 2010 WL 2724001, at *2 (D. Mass. July 8, 2010) aff’d, 657 F.3d 80 (1st 14 Cir. 2011); Kamilewicz v. Bank of Boston Corp., 100 F.3d 1348, 1352 (7th Cir. 1996).<sup>2</sup>

15 The months of negotiations to try to settle the TASE Purchasers’ separate case and extinguish 16 their legal rights took place in complete secrecy. When settlement negotiations began in the US case 17 in March 2013, TASE class counsel were not informed, were never asked to participate or discuss 18 the settlement proposals, or were never provided drafts of the Stipulation or Notice. Israeli counsel
19 for the putative class of TASE Purchasers were first told of the settlement on August 15, 2013, six
20 days after the “Unopposed” Preliminary Approval papers had been filed on August 9, 2013.<sup>3</sup>

21 The Preliminary Approval briefs referred to the expanded class definition (“purchasers...on 22 foreign exchanges or otherwise”) only twice - once in a footnote, once in a supplemental brief. The 23 settling parties never briefed or otherwise brought to the Court’s attention the significant 24 Morrison/Amchem/Rule 23/Constitutional issues, this expansion of the class definition, the release of 25 “foreign claims” language and the worldwide injunction against litigation raised by adding the TASE

26 <sup>2</sup> Here, as elsewhere, emphasis has been added unless otherwise stated.

27 <sup>3</sup> See Declaration of Gil Ron in Support of Objection of David Stern and the Putative Class of Tel 28 Aviv Stock Exchange Purchasers to Proposed Class Action Settlement and Memorandum in Support Thereof (“Ron Decl.”), at ¶31.

VeriFone stock purchasers – who had a separate class action pending in Israel, asserting Israeli law claims, represented by Israeli counsel. In fact, even the existence of the TASE class action in Israel was never disclosed to the Court – let alone “homed in on.” Amchem at 619-22.

The Court heard only from the US settling parties, who represented the Settlement was the product of “non-collusive negotiations”, provided no “preferential treatment” to USLP, “has no other defects”, and touted an individually mailed notice program as being so extensive and effective that it would miss “one percent (1%)”, at most, of class members and “has no other defects.” See Unopposed Motion for Preliminary Approval of Class Action Settlement, Dkt # 307, at p. 8-11. None of these statements were accurate.

The TASE Objectors are unable to determine if the aggregate amount of the Settlement is fair.<sup>4</sup> But the gross amount of the settlement does not assure fairness to all class members. It is but one of many factors to be considered in determining if the USLP has met its burden of proving all elements necessary to obtain final approval. The TASE Objectors seek not to “upset the apple cart.” They wish rather to keep it upright. While the settlement cannot now be approved, it may yet be salvaged following further action.

B. The Class Notice is Defective

There is good reason to suspect that individual mailed notices were not sent to the TASE Purchasers who were added as class members. Stern never received a mailed notice. Stern Decl., ¶2. A search in Israel, including inquiries to institutional investors, has not turned up one class member who received a mailed notice. Ron Decl., ¶33.

<sup>4</sup> We cannot tell if the valuable strict liability claims of the TASE Purchasers were actually vigorously in the mix when the dollar amount was negotiated; thus we do not waive this objection.

We do not waive the argument that Morrison and/or Amchem require the irrevocable disapproval of the US Settlement. Nor do we waive any argument that application of Rule 23 to approve this settlement would violate the Rules Enabling Act. Amchem, 521 U.S. at 613.:

Rule 23’s requirements must be interpreted in keeping with Article III constraints, and with the Rules Enabling Act, which instructs that rules of procedure “shall not abridge, enlarge or modify any substantive right, ...” 28 U.S.C. §2072(b).

Including purchasers on foreign exchanges via a Rule 23 settlement may violate the Rules Enabling Act if doing so “enlarges” the TASE Purchasers’ substantive rights by placing them in a settlement of claims they cannot assert. It may modify, if not abridge, the NYSE class members’ rights by forcing them to share the recovery fund with “class members” who have no right to sue for the settled claims.

Even assuming that notice was mailed to the TASE Purchasers, it is defective. The enlarged Settlement Class contained thousands of additional, often unsophisticated, individual investors living in Israel who purchased or received the VeriFone stock on the TASE. Many Israelis are far from fluent in English because Hebrew is the official language. Commerce and stock transactions take place in New Israeli Shekels (“NIS”).<sup>5</sup> For many TASE Purchasers, the English/dollars notice and claim form – if they ever saw one – is a confusing mishmash of legal and financial gibberish of foreign currency and foreign language – that many certainly cannot intelligently comprehend.<sup>6</sup>

C. The Plan of Allocation is Defective

The USLP represented to the Court that the “Plan of Allocation does not treat USLP preferentially. But it does. Thus, the Plan is not fair to all settlement class members. The TASE Purchasers’ claims (whether valued under US or Israeli law) are much stronger (and more valuable) in the settlement context than the 1934 Act claims pleaded by the USLP. All TASE Purchasers have non-fraud/strict liability claims – none of which require proof of scienter – compared to the claims of the NYSE purchasers – all of which require proof of scienter.

Despite this important qualitative distinction, the Plan of Allocation provides no recognition of or preferential allocation for those superior claims, even though it makes preferential allocations to increase or decrease the claims of other groups by 50% within the Settlement class.<sup>7</sup> By short-<sup>5</sup> The TASE utilizes a real-time computerized trading system trading in the NIS, the currency of Israel since January 1, 1986. TASE securities prices are quoted as agorot (http://www.tase.co.il/Eng/PublicationsandEducation/FAQ/FAQ\_Inv/Pages/\_Inv.aspx). “Investing on the TASE – FAQs”). The shekel consists of 100 agorot. Denominations made in this currency are marked with the shekel sign. ₪. See also, Laviner v. Camtek, Ltd., C-08-1327-MMC, 2009 WL 1542708 (N.D. Cal. June 2, 2009) (noting that where stocks are listed on both a US Exchange and the TASE, the stocks are traded in different currencies, namely the Dollar and Shekel.).

<sup>6</sup> The MANUAL FOR COMPLEX LITIGATION (FOURTH) (2004) § 21.31 (the “MANUAL”), states that counsel should discuss with the court whether publication of notice in a foreign language is appropriate. When so advised, courts have permitted or required class notices be in foreign languages. In re Assicurazioni Generali S.p.A. Holocaust Ins. Litig., M.D.L. No. 1374, 2007 WL 3129894 (S.D.N.Y., Oct. 26, 2007) (Requiring administrator to translate class notice and claim form into appropriate languages for foreign class members); In re Western Union Money Transfer Litig., No. 01 Civ. 0335(CPS), 2004 WL 3709932, at *5 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 19, 2004) (Where settlement class included foreign class members, individual notice must be sent to all class members be translated into various foreign languages).

<sup>7</sup> For instance, “recognized loss” distinctions of up to 50% between class members justified by differences of “scienter” loss causation at different times of the class period and limits on the changing the TASE Purchasers' strict liability claims, USLP preferred its own scienter claims and those of the NYSE purchasers it originally represented.

D. The Attorneys' Fees Provisions Are Defective

The Settlement is non-approvable due to the provisions stating that any fees awarded "shall be paid to Lead Counsel ... immediately after the Court executes an order awarding such fees" – a device called "Quick-Pay." To pay USLP's Class Counsel 100% of their fees "immediately", is a preference to Class Counsel that misaligns their interests with that of class members. "Quick Pay" allows the lawyers to get paid 100% immediately, even though the settlement and/or fee award judgment is not yet final and is subject to reversal or reduction on appeal. Quick Pay means class members have to wait an indeterminate time to get one penny – certainly 18-24 months – and perhaps more now that this Settlement has morphed into a global/multi-language class, a time-consuming worldwide claims process and a complex Plan of Allocation. Class Counsel have much more work to do to oversee the administration of this complex matter through to its conclusion.

This misalignment is exacerbated by the repayment promises of all counsel receiving "Quick Pay" fees being entirely UNSECURED! Nobody gets a multi-million dollar unsecured loan. No evidence has been submitted as to the financial ability of these plaintiffs' firms (located throughout the US) to honor their repayment promises. Neither courts nor class members should be required to accept a simple "we are good for it" assurance.

E. The Lack of Clarity in the Preliminary Approval Process Prevented Heightened Scrutiny of the Proposed Settlement

Because of the scant disclosure of the enlarged class definition during Preliminary Approval, several issues were never considered, let alone focused on: (i) was a Hebrew language notice with an enhanced claims solicitation/assistance program for the TASE purchaser class members needed (ii) was the class definition expansion inconsistent with the USLP's fiduciary duties of fair and adequate representation of all class members or did it require subclassing and separate representation; (iii) was the USLP's Plan of Allocation skewed to favor it and the other NYSE purchasers and short-change aggregate option purchaser share of the pot to "3%." See Stipulation of Settlement, Dkt # 306, Ex. A-1, at p. 6-11.

the TASE Purchasers of the Settlement Class; and (iv) were the unsecured “Quick Pay” attorneys’ fees provisions unfair to all class members.<sup>8</sup>

II. STATEMENT OF FACTS

This action was filed in December 2007. After the USLP and its counsel were designated, First and Second Amended Complaints were filed in October 2008 and June 2010, on behalf of “all purchasers of VeriFone publicly traded securities between August 31, 2006 and March 1, 2008.” The only claims asserted in the complaints were under Sections 10(b), 20(a) and 20A of the 1934 Act and Securities and Exchange Commission (“SEC”) Rule 10b-5 (17 C.F.R. 240.10b-5). In June 2010, Morrison was decided and quickly – and virtually uniformly – applied to preclude purchasers of stock on non-domestic exchanges from asserting Securities Act of 1933 (15 U.S.C. § 77a et seq.) (“1933 Act”)<sup>9</sup> and 1934 Act claims and excluding foreign exchange buyers from classes asserting 1933 and 1934 Act claims. Indeed, purchasers on the TASE of a dual listed traded company (like VeriFone) have been removed from US securities class actions after Morrison. CLAL Finance Batucha Investment Management, Ltd. v. Perrigo Co., No. 09-cv-2255-TPG, 2011 WL 5331648, at *2 (S.D.N.Y. Sep. 28, 2011).<sup>10</sup> In September 2010, as Morrison rippled through the courts, the USLP filed a Third Amended Consolidated Complaint (“TACC”). It contained the same class <sup>8</sup> Having reached out to sweep into a “global” settlement claims that were being litigated in a separate class action, in a foreign jurisdiction, asserting claims under foreign law, the settling parties were obligated to raise these significant issues during the “heightened scrutiny” preliminary approval process.

1 definition language and asserted the same claims. No further complaint was ever filed. None of these 2 complaints filed by the USLP ever referred to – let alone defined – the class as including purchasers
 3 of VeriFone securities on any “foreign exchange” in general – or the TASE specifically, where 4 VeriFone’s stock was listed and traded. However, all of these complaints did allege that VeriFone’s 5 “stock trades on the NYSE under the ticker symbol ‘PAY’ [and] ‘VeriFone stock met the 6 requirements for listing and was listed and actively traded on the NYSE [and] VeriFone files reports 7 with the SEC and the NYSE.’” TACC, Dkt 262, at pp. 42, 379-380. The TASE was never 8 mentioned!

9 In January 2008, Israeli lawyers, representing a purchaser of VeriFone stock on the TASE
 10 filed a class action in Israel asserting claims under the Israeli Securities Act of 1968 (“1968 Act”) on 11 behalf of all purchasers of VeriFone stock on the TASE between March 7, 2007 and December 2, 12 2007. Ron Decl., at ¶12. The VeriFone shares traded on the TASE had first been listed on the TASE
 13 in November 2006 when TASE listed and traded Lipman Electronic Engineering Ltd. (“Lipman”),<sup>11</sup> 14 was acquired by VeriFone for shares of VeriFone stock. The acquisition resulted in the issuance of 15 some 13-14 million new Verifone shares for the old Lipman shares. Post-merger, millions of 16 VeriFone shares were purchased on the TASE in “after market trading.”

17 Over the objection of Israeli Class counsel, an Israeli District Court stayed the Israeli Class 18 Action in April 2010. That decision was appealed to the Israeli Supreme Court. The appeal was 19 argued in January 2013. During argument, the parties reached a stipulation later formalized and “so 20 ordered” by the Supreme Court. The relevance of the Israeli Supreme Court proceeding and order are 21 discussed in our Response to the Seefer Declaration and the Ron Declaration (¶¶16-18, 25-29), 22 which are incorporated herein by reference.

26 <sup>11</sup> Lipman was a corporation headquartered in Israel. Its stock was traded on the TASE. The Lipman 27 acquisition was detailed in the TACC at ¶ 2. During the settlement class period, millions of shares 28 of VeriFone stock that were purchased (traded) on the TASE created damages that may approach a billion dollars. Israeli law has a more favorable damage measure than the US. Ron Decl., ¶¶18, 32, was reversed. In Re VeriFone Holdings, Inc. Sec. Litigation, 704 F.3d 694 (9th Cir. 2012).<sup>12</sup> After remand, no Motion for Class Certification was filed and no class was ever certified via contested motion practice.<sup>13</sup> No further Amended Complaint was filed. The US settling parties started settlement negotiations in March 2013, reaching agreement in June 2013. Israeli Class counsel were never informed of these negotiations, invited to participate, or asked to review a draft Stipulation or Notice. Ron Decl., at ¶31. On August 9, 2013, the USLP had filed a 14-page “Unopposed Motion” seeking Preliminary Approval of the Settlement (which included multiple pages of exhibits), asking the Court to “certify the class for settlement purposes.” Only then, six days later on August 15, 2013, after months of secret negotiations undertaken to settle their clients’ Israeli law claims, was Israeli counsel finally informed of the settlement and made aware of the filing.

In October 2013, the Court held the Preliminary Approval hearing.<sup>14</sup> The briefing, which repeatedly characterized the Motion as being “Unopposed”, never disclosed (i) the existence of the competing class action, or (ii) that, without prior notice to this Court or to Israeli Class counsel, the USLP and the defendants had expanded the class definition – for settlement purposes only – to include purchasers of VeriFone stock “on any domestic or foreign exchange or otherwise.”

There were only two references in the briefing to this very important, significantly expanded class definition – one in a footnote – another in a supplemental brief.<sup>15</sup> Neither reference revealed the change was made during the settlement negotiations to try to vacuum in, settle and extinguish the <sup>12</sup> Meanwhile, VeriFone’s stock was delisted on the TASE. Thus, VeriFone has faded from view in the Israeli financial world and is no longer traded there. This likely has serious implications for the notice procedures discussed at §V, infra.

<sup>13</sup> In an adversarial context, defendants would have opposed inclusion of foreign exchange purchasers in the class, and likely would have prevailed.

<sup>15</sup> Buried in the pile of papers originally submitted to obtain preliminary approval was the actual Stipulation of Settlement (Dkt # 308) which, in a mundane Section entitled “Definitions”, under the term “Class”, enlarged the class definition, adding the new words “on any domestic or foreign exchange or otherwise.” The “foreign” law release language was also buried in the “Definitions” section of the Stipulation in a dense, long, confusing section, “Released Claims.” Id., at ¶1.20. Unfortunately, courts often have to conduct a heightened scrutiny review confronted with a “mountain of evidence” submitted in a non-adversarial setting. Cf. Marcus v. BMW of N.A., LLC, 687 F.3d 583, 596-97 (3d Cir. 2012).

claims of thousands of TASE Purchasers who had a then-pending class action in a foreign jurisdiction, asserting claims under foreign law, being prosecuted by separate counsel. Nor was there any discussion – NOT ONE WORD – of the Morrison/Amchem/Rule 23 issues raised, by creating a global settlement-only class that could not have been certified under Morrison in a contested proceeding,<sup>16</sup> or of the words “foreign ... law” buried in the release language to support the worldwide injunction the Court was asked to enter. Nor was the adequacy of the notice “focused on” in light of the TASE Purchasers who live in a country where Hebrew/NIS are the language/currency having been added for settlement purposes only.

The issues presented by including the TASE Purchasers in the expanded class definition were never raised at the hearing.<sup>17</sup> Even though there were discussions at the hearing over the complexity of the Notice and the need to take proper steps to assure that investors – especially individual/unsophisticated investors – receive accurate and easy to understand information so that they could intelligently weigh their options – none of these important issues were presented when USLP’s Counsel had an opportunity and obligation to do so (Hrg. Tr., at p. 21:19-23):

THE COURT:...And the class is defined as anyone who traded VeriFone securities between two particular dates.

[USLP’s COUNSEL]: Right.

III. IN THE “HEIGHTENED SCRUTINY” REVIEW CONTEXT, THE USLP CANNOT SATISFY ITS BURDEN OF PROVING THE “SETTLEMENT ONLY” CLASS MEETS ALL THE REQUIREMENTS OF RULE 23, INCLUDING ITS DUTY OF FAIR AND ADEQUATE REPRESENTATION OF ALL MEMBERS OF THE SETTLING CLASS

A. USLP Must prove it Fulfilled its Rule 23 Fiduciary Duties to All Class Members

A class representative is a fiduciary for class members. Cohen v. Beneficial Indus. Loan Corp., 337 U.S. 541, 549 (1949); see also Crawford v. Equifax Payment Ser., Inc., 201 F.3d 877, 880 (7th Cir. 2000) (fiduciary duty to act in the best interests of all class members); Martens v.

<sup>16</sup> Amchem forbids judicial approval of settlements based on the creation of enlarged uncertifiable classes for the economic convenience and benefit of the settling parties – i.e., the much desired “global peace” for defendants and their insurance carriers, and potentially large attorneys’ fees for accommodating class counsel. Amchem, 521 U.S. at 626-28.

1 Thomann, 273 F.3d 159, 173 n. 10 (2d Cir. 2001) (same). This duty includes selecting class
 2 counsel who will diligently represent the interests of the class, not those of counsel, or of the lead
 3 plaintiff alone. In re Diamond Foods, Inc. Sec. Litig., 2013 WL 1891382, at *17 (N.D. Cal., May 6, 4 2013); Rule 23(a)(4). To ensure that the representative plaintiff fulfills his/her fiduciary duty owed 5 the absent class members, the Court “must inquire into the terms and circumstances of [the 6 settlement] to ensure that it is not collusive or prejudicial,” i.e., a “staged performance” of the type

9 “Class actions certified solely for settlement ... sometimes make meaningful judicial review
 10 more difficult and more important.” MANUAL §21.62. “[S]ettlement class actions” always required 11 “closer judicial scrutiny than approval of settlements reached only after class certification has been 12 litigated through the adversary process.” Id. From early on, courts were directed to hold these 13 settlements to a “higher standard of fairness.” Hanlon, 150 F.3d at 1026; see Rule 23(e).

14 It is USLP’s burden to show that the relevant Rule 23 requirements are met and that class 15 certification is warranted, including class certification for settlement purposes. See Narouz v.
 16 Charter Commc’ns, LLC, 591 F.3d 1261, 1266 (9th Cir. 2010) (for settlement purposes, “class
 17 plaintiff has the burden of showing that the requirements of Rule 23(a) are met and that the class is 18 maintainable pursuant to Rule 23(b)”) (citing Amchem, 521 U.S. at 613-14).<sup>19</sup> “[A] plaintiff must 19 show ... evidence specific to the ... geographic areas actually covered by the class definition to allow 20 a district court to make a factual finding.” Hayes v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 725 F.3d 349, 357 (3d Cir.

21 <sup>18</sup> The Court also “has a fiduciary duty to the non-representative class members who were not party
 22 to the settlement agreement because [i]nherent in any class action is the potential for conflicting 23 interests among the class representatives, class counsel, and absent class members.” Martens v.

 as a fiduciary, serving as a guardian of the rights of class members.”). MANUAL §21.61 (“Judicial review must be exacting and thorough. The task is demanding because the adversariness of litigation is often lost after the agreement to settle.”).

<sup>19</sup> Likewise, it is “proponents of the settlement that have the burden of sufficiently documenting that the settlement terms are fair, reasonable and adequate to the class.” Hemphill v. San Diego Ass’n of Realtors, Inc., 225 F.R.D. 616, 623 (S.D. Cal. 2005).

2013):

It is plaintiff's burden to show that a class action is a proper vehicle for this lawsuit. See Comcast Corp. v. Behrend, 133 S.Ct. 1426, 1432 (2103) ("The class action is an exception to the usual rule that litigation is conducted by and on behalf of the individual named parties only. To come within the exception, a party seeking to maintain a class action must affirmatively demonstrate his compliance with Rule 23." (Citations and quotation marks omitted.)).

Settlements negotiated prior to class certification are subject to an even "higher showing of fairness." In re Gen. Motors 55 F.3d at 805 ("We affirm the need for courts to be even more scrupulous than usual in approving settlements where no class has yet been formally certified").

B. The "Settlement Only" Class Settlement Must Be Given "Heightened Scrutiny"

After years of abuse, the courts demand clear proof of strict compliance with applicable Rule 23 standards. "[Class] certification is proper only if 'the trial court is satisfied, after a rigorous analysis, that the prerequisites of Rule 23(a) have been satisfied.' ... Frequently that 'rigorous analysis' will entail some overlap with the merits of the plaintiff's underlying claim. That cannot be helped." Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Dukes, 131 S.Ct. 2541, 2551 (2011) (internal citations omitted). "Factual determinations supporting Rule 23 findings must be made by a preponderance of the evidence." In re Hydrogen Peroxide Antitrust Litig., 552 F.3d 305, 307 (3d Cir. 2008), and the burden of proof rests on the movant, Id., at 316, Fn. 14. "A party's assurance to the court that it intends or plans to meet the requirements is insufficient." Id. at 318.

The polar star guiding federal district courts in the settlement approval process is Amchem, where Justice Ginsburg mandated that lower courts must pay "undiluted, even heightened attention" to class certification requirements in a settlement context." Amchem, 521 U.S. at 620.

The Ninth Circuit in Hanlon described Amchem:

Amchem was a settlement class action which attempted to settle all pending and future asbestos litigation. The asbestos manufacturers wished to resolve all claims, including those not yet filed. ... The class was never divided into sub-classes and additional counsel was never appointed to represent the interests of plaintiffs with as yet undeveloped or undiagnosed injuries. Despite these problems, the class was conditionally certified and the settlement approved.

The Third Circuit vacated the certification because the requirements of Rule 23 were not met independent of the settlement agreement. Georgine v. Amchem Products, Inc., 83 F.3d 610, 617-618 (3rd Cir. 1996). The Supreme Court affirmed. Amchem Products, Inc. v. Windsor, _ U.S._, 117 S.Ct. 2231, 138 L.Ed.2d 689

(1997). The Court found that the clashing interests of present and future claimants presented insurmountable conflicts for class counsel who could not possibly provide adequate representation to both groups as required by Rule 23(a)(4). Id. 117 S.Ct. at 2251. The Court also held that all of the Rule 23 standards for class actions must be met without regard to the presence or terms of a pending settlement agreement. Id. at 2249.

At the heart of Amchem was concern over settlement allocation decisions: . . . [the] amount of [settlement] money that was not fairly distributed between present and future claimants....The Supreme Court found this dual representation to be particularly troubling, given that present plaintiffs had a clear interest in a settlement that maximized current funds ....

150 F.3d at 1020-21.

The proposed settlement class could never have been certified to include “purchasers on foreign exchanges.” This would never fly under Morrison and its progeny. Thus, USLP settled claims it could not litigate on the merits, even though those claims were being presented in a foreign country, in a class action under foreign law. Those claims were stronger than any 1934 Act claims that could have gone forward to trial if the US Class Action was terminated and the stay in Israel lifted. This “disarmed” both the USLP and the Court. Amchem, 521 U.S. at 621. The “threat of litigation” could not be used to “press for a better offer” for the foreign exchange class members’ claims swept into the global settlement. Id.

Amchem stressed the requirements of our Constitution and Rule 23 concerning judicial approval of class action settlements. They may be approved “only” if class representative(s) carry their burden of proof that they both fairly adequately represented the interests of this class, the settlement is “fair, reasonable and adequate”, and that the class notice complied with due process and Rule 23(c)(2)(B) requirements (Amchem, 521 U.S. at 608, 617):

Subdivisions (a) and (b) of Rule 23 focus court attention on whether a proposed class action has sufficient unity so that absent members can fairly be bound by decisions of class representatives. That dominant concern persists when settlement ... is proposed.

Id., at 621. It is not enough that the settlement looks “big”:

The safeguards provided by the Rule 23(a) and (b) ... [are] ... the standards set for the protection of absent class members serve to inhibit appraisals of the chancellor’s foot kind – class certifications dependent upon the court’s gestalt judgment or overarching impression of the settlement's fairness.<sup>20</sup>

As the Third Circuit pointed out, named parties ... sought to act on behalf of a single giant class rather than on behalf of discrete subclasses. In significant respects, the interests of those within the single class are not aligned.

Id., at 621, 625.

Obviously, all class members want a "big" settlement – but, as always, the devil is in the details:

"But the settlement does more than simply provide a general recovery fund", the Court of Appeals immediately added; "[r]ather, it makes important judgments on how recovery is to be allocated among different kinds of plaintiffs, decisions that necessarily favor some elements over others." 83 F.3d at 630.

The settling parties, in sum, achieved a global compromise with no structural assurance of fair and adequate representation for the diverse groups and individuals affected.

Id. at 611, 28. In such a situation:

"[W]here differences among members of a class are such that subclasses must be established, we know of no authority that permits a court to approve a settlement without creating subclasses. The class representatives may well have thought that the Settlement serves the aggregate interests of the entire class. But the adversity among subgroups requires that the members of each subgroup cannot be bound to a settlement except by consents given by those who understand that their role is to represent solely the members of their respective subgroups." In re Joint Eastern and Southern Dist. Asbestos Litigation, 982 F.2d 721, 742-743 (1992), modified on reh'g sub nom. In re Findley, 993 F.2d 7 (1993).

The Third Circuit found no assurance here – either in the terms of the settlement or in the structure of the negotiations – that the named plaintiffs operated under a proper understanding of their representational responsibilities. 83 F.3d at 630-631. That assessment, we conclude, is on the mark.

<sup>20</sup> About 350 years ago, the English legal scholar John Selden articulated the classic complaint about the chancery's exercise of jurisdiction in equity. Selden remarked in his Table Talk,

Equity is A Roguish thing....Equity is according to the conscience of him that is Chancellor. ...Tis all one as if they should make the Standard for the measure wee call A foot, to be the Chancellors foot; what an uncertain measure would this be; One Chancellor has a long foot another A short foot a third an indifferent foot; tis the same thing in the Chancellors Conscience.

The "Chancellor's foot" has since become proverbial shorthand for the argument that equity is an unjustified and unfortunate interference in the regular course of the rule of law. H. Jefferson Powell, "Cardozo's Foot": The Chancellor's Conscience and Constructive Trusts, 56 LAW & CONTEMP. PROB., 3, 7 (1993).

1 “... specifications of the Rule – those designed to protect absentees by blocking
 2 unwarranted or overbroad class definitions – demand undiluted, even heightened,
 3 attention in the settlement context. Such attention is of vital importance, ... [Since 4 otherwise the] court would face a bargain proffered for its approval without benefit
 5 of adversarial investigation, see, e.g., Kamilewicz v. Bank of Boston Corp., 100 F.3d

10 The evidence submitted justifying the Settlement falls far short of the mark. Generic and 11 boilerplate declarations by USLP and its allies fail to provide the necessary detail to support 12 settlement approval. The two-page declaration of the mediator singing the praises of all involved, 13 assuring that he “closely” presided over the negotiations, which were “conducted at arm’s length”, 14 “carefully” and in “good faith” by all parties, concluded:

15 The mediation process involved extensive analysis of the parties’ positions, 16 including the merits of plaintiffs’ securities fraud claims, orders of this Court and 17 the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit on VeriFone’s motions to 18 dismiss, defendants’ potential defenses, the amount of available directors’ and 19 officers’ liability insurance and defendants’ financial condition.

20 Declaration of Layn R. Phillips, Dkt #325, at ¶5. Yes – reassuring generalities, but that is all. There 21 was no evidence that any of the following were considered: (i) the expansion of the class definition;
 22 (ii) the Israeli law of strict liability; (iii) the reasons for the US Class to get a premium; (iv) the 23 potential conflicts and allocation issues; or (v) the competing legal claims evaluated. The mediator
 24 cannot heap praise in the generalized terms, then claim that detailed information cannot be shared 25 because it is “confidential.” These are not star chamber proceedings. A mediator cannot issue
 26 broadsides of praise without providing the Court with the facts needed to conduct a “heightened 27 scrutiny” review. This Declaration must be stricken.

28 The Gilardi firm’s Final Approval Declaration does not contain the word “Israel.”
 Declaration of Carole K. Sylvester (“Sylvester Decl.”), Dkt # 326. It does claim that 95,000 notices have been mailed and 2,949 claims have already been submitted “near the end of” the claims period.
 But an unanswered important question is – how many Notices were mailed and how many claims are

1 from the TASE Purchasers.<sup>21</sup>

2 USLP in its Final Declaration, not surprisingly, issues a ringing endorsement of its hand-
 3 picked class counsel and of its own conduct as well. Decl. of Robert O. Betts (“Betts Decl.”), Dkt #
 4 324. As to itself, it says it “participated in the litigation”, was “fully informed regarding the 5 prosecution of the case”, the “settlement strategy” and “monitored and was kept informed about the 6 progress of the settlement”, including attendance at the mediations. Betts Decl., at ¶4. Again, 7 generalities. What did USLP know about the Israeli TASE class action? When was it a matter of 8 consideration? Why were negotiations secreted from TASE Purchasers and the Israeli counsel? Why
 9 did the Plan of Allocation not recognize the superior value of the TASE Purchasers’ strict liability 10 claims? What was its involvement in formulating the Plan of Allocation which favored itself?

11 These broad, general reassurances and “boilerplate” declarations are used repeatedly by these 12 lawyers with only the case names and numbers changing, as they churn out settlements. Final 13 approval requires “heightened scrutiny” including detailed factual findings supported by an 14 evidentiary record reflecting the adversarial process in this case. The USLP<sup>22</sup> and Gilardi, should be 15 present at the Final Approval Hearing to assist the Court in its “heightened scrutiny” review. Israeli 16 counsel will be there.

25 The express reference to purchasers on “foreign exchanges or otherwise” was never included
 26

27 <sup>21</sup> The 2,949 claims appear to be very small, i.e., “low claim rate case.” The case is 6 years old and 28 VeriFone has been delisted for over three years from one of two exchanges it was listed on. This is significant for two reasons. First, it calls into significant question the sufficiency of the entire notice process. Secondly, if this is a “low claims rate” case, this means the individual class member recoveries may be unusually large – which means the conflicting allocation issues among the class members are of increased importance – there is more at stake!

<sup>22</sup> [I]t is incumbent on the [USLP] to be alert for, and to report to the Court, any conflict of interest on the part of class counsel . . . See, generally, 7A C. Wright, A. Miller & M. Kane, FEDERAL PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE, §1769.1, at 386-87 (1986).

1 in the class definition before settlement negotiations began. This modification took place during the 2 settlement negotiations. It was only first ever presented to the Court as part of a “mountain” of 3 “Unopposed” motion papers submitted to obtain Preliminary Approval. What transpired here
 4 involves a lack of transparency and a shortfall in the duty of all to act with candor – a duty always 5 present – but even more important where, as here, it involved a large, purportedly global class-action
 6 settlement requiring the Court’s “heightened scrutiny.” Despite this, during the Preliminary 7 Approval process, neither the USLP or the defendants ever disclosed the existence of the Israeli 8 Class Action, or raised its existence for consideration, never disclosed that the Settlement would 9 extinguish claims in a foreign jurisdiction, release foreign law claims, and require entering a 10 worldwide perpetual injunction against any Settlement class member from prosecuting any claims
 11 anywhere worldwide!<sup>23</sup> Nor did VeriFone ever “notify” this Court of the inclusion of the Israeli 12 Class members in their US Class Action as it agreed to do at the direction of the Israeli Supreme 13 Court. See TASE Objectors’ Response to Seefer Declaration.

14 USLP certainly never alerted the Court to the Morrison/Amchem limitations and 15 constitutional issues this extraterritorial global settlement raised. When parties fail to act with 16 candor, the Court cannot conduct a “heightened scrutiny” review. Why did no counsel to the settling 17 parties simply write or say to the Court: “we enlarged the class definition to include purchases on 18 ‘foreign exchanges and otherwise,’ to include a competing class action in Israel, which raises some 19 issues your Honor might want to consider for instance....” Then a candid discussion of the legal 20 issues presented could have occurred and the Court could have properly focused on them.<sup>24</sup>

21 _____
 22 <sup>23</sup> How disturbingly convenient. Defendants get the Israeli case stayed until termination of the US
 23 case. They surreptitiously add the Israeli Class members to the Settlement Class here to extinguish 24 the TASE Purchasers’ claims, and get a perpetual global injunction from this Court against them 25 litigating those claims in Israel. Add to that – the Israelis received no notice/claim form mailed to 26 them – at least in a language they could clearly understand and thus end up getting NONE (or 27 virtually none) of the Settlement proceeds. If Rule 23’s fairness standards mean anything, they 28 mean that no court would ever sanction such an outcome.

<sup>24</sup> Given the opaque circumstances under which the TASE Purchasers have been bundled into this settlement class, without their consent suggests that especially heightened scrutiny of all aspects of the Settlement is called for – including requiring the settling parties to disclose any agreements or understandings that may exist outside the four corners of the Settlement – as required by Rule 23(e)(3), including, for example, the so-called “Blow” provision. Was the TASE volume considered and used in the Blow provision?

B. The Plan of Allocation Prefers the USLP and Short-Changes TASE Purchasers

The Settlement created a complex Plan of Allocation to carve up the settlement proceeds among various groups of class members with competing, at times conflicting, interests. Examples of this are the provisions that limit the total amount to be paid options purchasers (up to 3% of the overall net settlement) and differential calculations of “recognized loss” for persons who purchased VeriFone stock at differing periods during the class period, favoring some – disadvantaging others – by 50%! See Stipulation of Settlement, Dkt # 306, Ex. A-1, at p. 6-11. But in crafting the Plan of Allocation, USLP improperly favored its claims over the claims of the TASE Purchasers having superior rights under both the Israeli law they plead, or the US law that USLP somehow thinks may apply notwithstanding Morrison.

Israeli securities laws are substantially more favorable to and protective of investors than the US securities laws, which in recent years have undergone a significant contraction due to restrictive legislation and court decisions. A very significant element of an open market securities fraud claim under US law (the 1934 Act) – and likely the most serious impediment to a plaintiff’s recovery – is the element of “scienter”, i.e., knowledge or fraudulent intent. To obtain preliminary approval, the settling parties sang in perfect harmony on this point – stressing over and over that this significant hurdle justified in large part the Settlement.<sup>25</sup>

The 1968 Act makes clear that the liability standards under that Act are extremely favorable to Israeli citizens buying securities on the TASE, at least when compared to the 1934 Act, which covers the US stock exchange purchasers. The 1968 Act provides:

Section 31. Liability of signatories of prospectus

- (a) (1) Any party signing a prospectus ... is liable to anyone who bought securities from the offeror ... [or] ... in the course of trading a stock exchange, or over the counter, for damage caused to them by the inclusion of a misleading item in the prospectus.<sup>26</sup>

<sup>25</sup> Throughout, defendant filed briefs emphasizing that the “USLP” “acknowledged” the “particular challenges” and difficulties in “proving scienter.” Dkt # 309.

<sup>26</sup> “Misleading item” is defined as “including something that is likely to mislead a reasonable investor, and any matter the omission of which is likely to mislead a reasonable investor.”

Section 38B. Civil liability of principal shareholders or of senior corporation officer

The provision of sections 31 through 34 shall apply, mutatis mutandis, to a principal shareholder or to a senior corporate officer who has submitted a report or notice . . .

* * *

Section 38C. Liability for damage on account of misleading item in report, notice or document

(a) The provisions of sections 31 to 34 shall apply, as applicable and mutatis mutandis:

(1) To a corporation, director of a corporation, its general manager or a controlling shareholder therein – with regard to a misleading item that was in a report, notice or document that the corporation filed pursuant to this law.<sup>27</sup>

In order to avoid the otherwise strict liability imposed on issuers, directors, senior corporate officers, and principal and/or controlling shareholders under the 1968 Act, a potentially liable party must prove, as an affirmative defense under Section 33, negating liability:

(1) . . . that he or she has taken all appropriate measures to ensure that the prospectus, opinion, report or certification . . . did not contain any misleading items, and that he or she believed in good faith that it did not contain any such items.

Another important difference is that under Israel's "safe harbor" provision (§32A), the immunity for false forward-looking statements is significantly narrower than the absolute immunity available under US law and likely does not protect this corporate issuer at all. Immunity for false forward-looking statements under Israeli law requires that a defendant prove:

(3) Clear emphasis was placed on the main factors that are to be viewed as being likely to result in the forward-looking information not being realized.

More importantly, under the 1968 Act, there is no absolute forward-looking statement immunity. Under the 1968 Act, any "party that knew that the forward-looking information would not be realized" does not have immunity – an exception not recognized in US law which provides <sup>27</sup> The words "report, notice or document" receives a broad interpretation under Israeli law. Pursuant to Israeli Securities Regulations (Periodic and Immediate Reports of Foreign Corporation), §§ 5761-2000, documents filed with the SEC must also be filed with the Israeli Securities Authority and the TASE.

1 absolute immunity.<sup>28</sup>

2 These are important differences. The Israeli liability standard of all defendants to all
 3 purchasers, including purchasers in the “trading (open) market”, is – prima facie – strict liability.
 4 Knowledge of falsity – scienter – is not required for liability. Knowledge only must be proven to 5 overcome forward-looking statement immunity. Liability exists under Israeli law not only for 6 “misleading items” in a prospectus but also any “report, notice or document filed by the issuer.” And 7 strict liability is not limited only to the corporation, but extends to directors, principals or controlling
 8 shareholders, senior corporate officers and corporate general managers.<sup>29</sup>

9 Even if somehow – despite Morrison – US law applied<sup>30</sup> to the TASE Purchasers’ claims – 10 the differential value analysis still applies. The VeriFone shares listed on the TASE were, as part of 11 the Lipman merger, issued via a 1933 Act Registration Statement, giving those purchasing these 12 shares in the TASE aftermarket a strict liability §11 claim. The NYSE purchasers do NOT have this 13 strict liability claim; USLP had no §11 claims. And in seven years, USLP despite amending its

14 <sup>28</sup> The prospectus for the Lipman merger (Registration Statement, Form S-4, Amendment No. 2, 15 filed with the SEC August 8, 2006) by which the new VeriFone shares were issued to TASE
 16 Purchasers was filled with forward-looking statements. However, the pages of boilerplate warnings
 17 did not place any emphasis on one over the other in terms of “likely” impact. No “main factors” 18 were identified as likely to result in the forward-looking statement not coming to fruition. If at trial, either knowledge or the lack of differential analysis was proved, it would have voided any legal immunity. In this case, there was no forward-looking statement liability immunity in Israel when under US law the immunity was absolute.

19 <sup>29</sup> While the Israeli courts granted VeriFone’s stay request, they never made any final ruling on the 20 ongoing interlocutory dispute as to whether Israeli or US substantive law applied to the claims 21 asserted there under the Israeli Class Action law. The Israel Supreme Court proceedings in January
 22 and February 2013 are discussed in detail in the TASE Objectors’ Response to the Seefer Declaration. The Israeli lawyers for the TASE class made clear their position that Israeli law controlled and should any attempt be made later to settle the claims asserted in Israel for the Israeli/TASE class in the competing US Class Action, the superior value of those claims under Israeli law had to be factored in. Ron Decl., at ¶32.

23 <sup>30</sup> This Court, before which these Israeli purchaser claims have now been brought has never made 24 any such ruling. How could it under Morrison? Indeed, that legal question has never been presented 25 to this Court. This Court, unlike the court in Israel, is expert in US law and, unlike the Israeli court, 26 is bound to follow the precedents of the US federal court system. Morrison and its progeny are 27 quite clear in stating that purchasers on foreign exchanges do not have legal rights under the US 28 securities laws. No deference is due the Israeli courts’ non-binding comments. Importantly, whatever statements were made by Israeli judges in this regard were not a “final ruling.” The Israeli judge actually said “Not, we will interpret Morrison.” Response to Seefer Decl., at p. 3. VeriFone was directed by the Israeli Supreme Court as part of its stay order to “notify” this Court of the potential inclusion of the Israeli Class members in the US Action which VeriFone simply ignored.
 Ron Decl., at ¶28.

1 complaint numerous times never pleaded any §11 claims on behalf of the TASE Purchasers or 2 otherwise.

3 USLP is trapped. No matter what law applies, the TASE Purchasers had their superior non-4 scienter strict liability claims short-changed by the Plan of Allocation. It is securities law 101 that a
5 claim that does not require proof of fraudulent conduct, i.e., actual knowledge or recklessness –
6 especially a “strict liability” claim – is of greater settlement value than a claim requiring proof of 7 scienter. In fact, plans of allocation involving 1933 Act and 1934 Act claims routinely include 8 differential allocations between these claims in order for settlement to be viewed as fair, just and 9 adequate to class members.

10 C. The “Quick Pay” Attorneys’ Fee Provisions Are Unfair to All Class Members

11 USLP cannot prove that the provision that any fees awarded by the Court “shall be paid to 12 Lead Counsel ... immediately after the Court executes an order awarding such fees”, so-called 13 “Quick-Pay”, is fair to class members. Stipulation of Settlement, Dkt # 306, at ¶6.2. It is not fair and 14 not equitable to class members. Rather, it is a breach of counsel’s duty not to prefer itself over the 15 class. “Quick Pay” gets the lawyers their money immediately. They get 100% immediately, even 16 though the Settlement approval and/or fee award judgment is not final, even though the class
17 members will have to wait months or even years, to get one penny. And the Settlement approval
18 remains subject to appeal and reversal or modification. This is objectionable under any circumstance
19 – but more so here where the settlement is complex and worldwide – requiring a global claims
20 process involving a complex Plan of Allocation, bound to result in confusion of class members.<sup>31</sup>

21 This basic lack of fairness is exacerbated by allowing the repayment obligations of counsel
22 receiving “Quick Pay” fees to be UNSECURED!<sup>32</sup> Because any fee repayment would be owed to the

24 <sup>31</sup>“Quick Pay” disincentivizes Lead Counsel from vigorously overseeing the claims administration 25 process through to conclusion – including the monetary distribution to the clients in a way that 26 assures proper treatment of all class members.

27 <sup>32</sup> On November 15, 2013, the Supreme Court granted certiorari in Halliburton Co., et al. v. Erica 28 P. John Fund, Inc., No. 13-317, to address the fraud-on-the-market presumption. Lead counsel justified the Settlement in part by citing the risk to securities class actions posed by the then abstract risk the Court would someday curtail the use of the fraud on the market doctrine, which “underpins certification of securities class actions” and the elimination of which would make it substantially more difficult to get or maintain class certification in these cases. See Motion for Final Approval,

1 Settlement Fund for the benefit of the class, these self-serving fee payment terms create a conflict
 2 between class counsel and the class members whose interests they are supposed to protect. The class
 3 should not be forced to take the financial risk of class counsel (there are some 15-20 plaintiffs'
 4 counsel throughout the US who stand to get fees doled out at the "discretion" of USLP's Counsel)
 5 not being able to repay what they owe.<sup>33</sup>

6 Defendants' willingness to accommodate class counsels' interests<sup>34</sup> in return for crafting an 7 expanded Settlement Class providing them "global peace" is understandable. Why the USLP would 8 permit this is not as clear – although it's counsel did craft and get Preliminary Approval of a Plan of 9 Allocation giving preferential treatment to the USLP while representing to the Court it did not. The 10 USLP has provided no evidence to justify this "unsecured" obligation.<sup>35</sup> The "Quick Pay" fee
 11 provisions must be eliminated or revised to provide for an ironclad surety bond assuring full 12 repayment of all fees.<sup>36</sup>

 17 Dkt 321, at p. 14. Now that formerly abstract threat is real and imminent and it could threaten the 18 finances of plaintiffs' securities class action firms.

19 <sup>33</sup> These are uncertain financial times in the legal business. Even large, prestigious firms have failed 20 (or made major layoffs) in recent years. See e.g. "The Anatomy of Law Firm Failures, Hildebrandt, 21 Nov. 19, 2008 - http://media.insidecounsel.com/insidecounsel/historical/white\_paper432.pdf; Heller

25 <sup>34</sup> Note, however, that defendants insulate themselves from any responsibility for this self-dealing 26 maneuver. Stipulation of Settlement, Dkt # 306, at ¶6.5-6.7.

27 <sup>35</sup> No fees should be awarded now given the necessity for a revised Settlement, a new Notice
 28 program, etc. But if fees ever are awarded, Israeli counsel are entitled to fair compensation as well.
 Despite defendants efforts, the Israeli Class Action was never dismissed and was pending when the settling parties modified the class definition to explicitly include the TASE Purchasers in the settlement (if valid), entitled them to their fair share of the fund.

<sup>36</sup> The potential for self-serving back-scratching here is obvious. The USLP has served as a plaintiff in many securities class actions using its favored counsel. It serves as a USLP, benefits from preferred treatment via opaque distinctions in complex, hard to understand Plans of Allocation drafted by counsel who use this Plaintiff to get control of cases, generating fees. This synergistic practice is great for them but not for absent class members.

V. IF CLASS NOTICE WAS MAILED TO THE TASE PURCHASERS IT IS STILL DEFECTIVE UNDER RULE 23 AS TO TASE PURCHASERS FOR NOT BEING IN THE “CLEAR, CONCISE AND EASILY UNDERSTOOD LANGUAGE” (HEBREW AND NEW ISRAEL SHEKELS) NEEDED FOR THEM TO “INTELLIGENTLY” WEIGH THEIR OPTIONS, AND NOT PROVIDING FOR ENHANCED CLASS MEMBER CLAIM-FILING ASSISTANCE TO ASSURE A “LEVEL PLAYING FIELD” FOR THEM TO SEEK THEIR FAIR SHARE OF THE SETTLEMENT FUND

A. The Stringent Notice Requirements of Rule 23 and the US Constitution

“[I]ndividual notice to identifiable class members is not discretionary” [the] “court is required to direct to class members the best notice practicable under the circumstances.” Eisen v. Carlisle & Jacquelin, 417 U.S. 156, 174-76 (1974). Such notices must be in clear, concise, plain, and easily understood language. See Rule 23(c)(2)(b). The “best notice practicable” standard demanded by due process asks if notice was accomplished by means that “one desirous of actually informing the absentee might reasonable adopt to accomplish it.”<sup>37</sup> Mullane v. Cent. Hanover Bank & Trust Co., 339 U.S. 306, 315 (1950).

B. There is No Evidence Proving That Individual Mailed Notices Were Sent to the TASE Purchasers

At the preliminary approval hearing, the Court immediately focused on the proposed Notice, specifically asking about what “reasonable methods” had been taken to identify all the class members. Hrg. Tr., at pp. 9-11. The Court’s concerns were responded to with reassurances of ease and regularity with respect to the mailed Notice. To ameliorate the Court’s concerns, USLP responded to the Court “[t]he class is not going to be hard to notify” and twice stated that mailed Notice “would likely miss 1% of class members at most.” Hrg. Tr., at pp. 10-11.

From what the TASE Objectors can discover, no notice was ever mailed to the TASE Purchasers of the settlement class. Ron Decl., at ¶23. Neither the Israeli Representative Plaintiff nor <sup>37</sup> “Courts have frequently held that adequate notice requires accommodation [for] the language limitations of a non-citizen audience.” Walters v. Reno, C94-1204C, 1996 WL 897662 at *12 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 13, 1996) citing Padilla-Augustin v. INS, 21 F.3d 970, 976 (9th Cir.1994) (explaining that when the alien is representing himself and has language difficulties, “a high degree of clarity should be a part of the process accorded”); Orantes-Hernandez v. Smith, 541 F.Supp. 351, 386 (C.D.Cal.1982) (issuing preliminary injunction requiring that Salvadoran refugees receive notice of their rights in English and Spanish.). “There is nothing in Rule 23 to suggest that the notice requirements can be tailored to fit the pocketbooks of particular plaintiffs.” Eisen, 417 U.S. at 176. Under Phillips Petroleum Co. v. Shutts, protections to absentee class members include constitutionally adequate notice, a right to opt out, and, at all times, adequate representation by the named plaintiff. 472 U.S. 797, 811-12 (1985).

1 institutional investors contacted by Israeli Class counsel received it. This Court must insist on the 2 creation of a detailed evidentiary record establishing exactly who was notified by the (required)
 3 mailed Notice, specifically addressing what was mailed to the TASE Purchasers.<sup>38</sup> The 4 supplemental declarations submitted by the Gilardi firm set out, in excruciating detail, what would 5 be done to notify class members by mail. If those steps were taken regarding the TASE Purchasers,
 6 there must be documents evidencing the mailed Notice to TASE Purchasers. However, the Gilardi
 7 Final Approval Declaration does not even contain the word “Israel.” Sylvester Decl., Dkt # 326.<sup>39</sup>

8 C. Even If It Was Mailed, The English Language Printed Notice and the Settlement
 9 Website Are Defective For Not Being In Hebrew

10 The need to consider the foreign language/currency issues should have been obvious to 11 counsel. The MANUAL FOR COMPLEX LITIGATION, fourth edition, § 21.31, states that counsel should 12 discuss with the court whether publication of notice in a foreign language is appropriate.<sup>40</sup>

 14 <sup>38</sup> There was a Summary Notice published in “Globes” in Hebrew! Sylvester Decl., Ex. D., at ¶ 15.
 15 Globes is a financial paper in Israel with a circulation of about 100,000, .05% of Israelis. It was 16 never revealed to the Court that Globes was an Israeli paper, or that published notice would be 17 translated into Hebrew! Of course not. Any “focus” on Israel was the last thing the performers 18 wanted. Even if that notice was perfect, it solves nothing. Individual mailed notice was ordered and 19 required. The Globes notice was just a superficial summary notice, published in an obscure paper 20 that was written in terrible Hebrew. It appears they simply used “Google” or MS Word was their 21 translator! Gil Ron Decl., ¶32

18 <sup>39</sup> The TASE Objectors requested that the Gilardi firm provide them specific information about the 19 mailing to TASE purchasers. Lead Counsel rejected the request, so we cannot provide more detail.
 20 Declaration of Jeffrey R. Krinsk in Support of Objection o David Stern And The Putative Tel Aviv
 21 Stock Exchange Purchasers To Proposed Class Action Settlement, Ex. A and B.

21 <sup>40</sup> The Federal Judicial Center has also published a set of guidelines applicable to class action notice 22 and claims process which suggested that a judge should “[c]onsider the demographics of the class to 23 determine whether notice is necessary in Spanish or another language.” Federal Judicial Center, 24 JUDGES CLASS ACTION NOTICE AND CLAIMS PROCESS CHECKLIST & PLAIN LANGUAGE GUIDE, p. 4
 25 (2010); see also Kaufman v. Am. Exp. Travel Related Servs., Inc., 283 F.R.D. 404, 408 (N.D. Ill.
 26 2012) (citing the JUDGES CLASS ACTION NOTICE AND CLAIMS PROCESS CHECKLIST & PLAIN 27 LANGUAGE GUIDE). Courts have approved and often directed class notices to be in foreign 28 languages. See e.g., Smith v. DaimlerChrysler Services North America, LLC, No. Civ.A.00-CV-6003, 2005 WL 2739213, at *3 (D.N.J. Oct. 24, 2005) (approving class settlement with notice published in Spanish); In re Assicurazioni Generali S.p.A. Holocaust Ins. Litig., M.D.L. No. 1374, 2007 WL 3129894 (S.D.N.Y., Oct. 26, 2007) (approving class notice and claim form requiring administrator to mail the class notice and claim form translated into appropriate languages for foreign class members); In re Western Union Money Transfer Litig., No. 01 Civ. 0335(CPS), 2004 WL 3709932, at *5 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 19, 2004) (where settlement class included foreign class members, individual notice must be sent to all class members identifiable and requiring publication notice including, inter alia, “media outreach in the form of a press release, video news release, and”

1 The class now includes thousands of additional, and often unsophisticated, individual
 2 investors living in a foreign country who purchased VeriFone stock on a foreign stock exchange, in a
 3 country where the language is Hebrew which is read backwards from English, i.e., right to left, and 4 where commercial transactions, including stock trading, take place in local currency, not dollars.
 5 This renders the English language Notice by which the TASE Purchasers were to make important 6 decisions regarding their legal rights in a financial case a confusing welter of complex legal and 7 financial information in a language not easily understood.<sup>41</sup>

8 For any settlement of this case as presently constituted to pass “muster”, there must be a 9 Notice to the TASE Purchasers in Hebrew using Israeli currency presenting in clear and easily 10 understood language – the information necessary for them to make an “intelligent” decision with 11 respect to the proposed Settlement, including whether to opt out or further object to the allocation
 12 and attorneys’ fees provisions.<sup>42</sup>

13 VI. THE TASE OBJECTORS RESPECTFULLY REQUEST: (I) THE COURT DELAY, OR DENY, 14 FINAL APPROVAL WITHOUT PREJUDICE; (II) DESIGNATE A SUBCLASS OF THE TASE
 15 PURCHASER MEMBERS OF THE CLASS WITH SEPARATE REPRESENTATION; AND (III)
 16 DIRECT THE PARTIES TO PROMPTLY RENEGOTIATE, IF THEY CAN, A PROPOSED
 17 SETTLEMENT THAT CAN – AFTER “HEIGHTENED REVIEW” – SATISFY RULE 23

18 The TASE Objectors are not professional objectors carping about minutia to extort a fee. The 19 TASE class action was an important case for Israeli citizens – where their laws provide them 20 enhanced strict liability causes against the defendant, where scienter need not be proved and where 21 the fraud on the market theory is not under imminent threat. They are not seeking a fee to just “get 22 out of the way”<sup>43</sup> – just one more collusive accommodation the defendants and USLP’s need to 23 radio news release, to be translated into various foreign languages and distributed internationally”).

24 <sup>41</sup> Moreover, the settlement website (www.verifonesettlement.com) including all documents, 25 notices, instructions, and claim forms are entirely in English.

26 <sup>42</sup> If modification of the settlement or an enhanced, more robust notice program is called for, the 27 USLP and defendants have only themselves to blame. The USLP should be ordered to pay for all 28 costs associated with a new notice, claims solicitation and administration program and not be reimbursed for it from the settlement fund. Its overreaching and inadequate representation caused the necessity of further notice. The class members should not be made to pay for the mistakes of and breaches of duty by the USLP. Amchem and Eisen v. Carlisle & Jacquelin, 417 U.S. 156 (1974) are clear that required notice may not be relaxed based on the high cost needed to fulfill due process concerns.

1 accomplish to achieve their synergetic goals of a big “payday” and “global peace.” The TASE class
 2 representative and his counsel are willing to immediately make the effort to try to salvage the 3 Settlement so it can again be considered for Preliminary and, perhaps some day, Final Approval.<sup>44</sup>
 4 The Court’s heightened scrutiny and fiduciary obligations do not obligate it to spend time trying to 5 revise a faulty settlement – at least where there is so much complex revision necessary. Counsel 6 expert in these specialized matters must undertake this task. Revision here is an obligation of the 7 lawyers for the settling parties, including Israeli counsel.

8 The Court’s powers here are all but plenary. See Rule 23(c)(1)(C). Stern requests the Court:
 9 (i) defer or deny without prejudice, Final Approval; (ii) designate a subclass of TASE purchasers and 10 order the separate representation (counsel for the putative Israeli Class) necessary to provide that 11 group the unconflicted representation they are entitled to;<sup>45</sup> (iii) direct the parties to begin immediate 12 negotiations to address the defects in the Settlement to see if it can be revised to comply with Rule 13 23; and (iv) present a revised settlement to the Court (if they can) within fifteen (15) days. Of course, 14 complex issues will still have to be reviewed with “heightened scrutiny” by the Court, but at least in 15 a revised settlement – the key allocation issues, notice issues, fee payment issues (and no doubt 16 others) – will be the result of the needed, but to date missing, adversarial process.
